Alexandria Police Department
Alexandria, Virginia

Dear Friends,

Melania and I send our congratulations to the Alexandria Police Department as you celebrate 150 years of service to your community.

On streets and in neighborhoods across our country, America's police officers put their lives on the line every day to respond to emergencies and to maintain order. The dedicated men and women of law enforcement uphold their duty to protect and serve, often at great risk to their own well-being or in the aftermath of great tragedy.

We join your community in thanking all those who serve in the Alexandria Police Department, and we send our best wishes during this special milestone.

Sincerely,

COMMONWEALTH of VIRGINIA

Office of the Governor

Ralph S. Northam
Governor

Dear Friends:

On behalf of the Commonwealth of Virginia, I would like to congratulate the Alexandria Police Department (APD) on its 150th Anniversary. Founded in 1870, APD has served residents of Alexandria with honor and contributed to the wellbeing of our communities in the Commonwealth.

As Governor, it is my priority to ensure that all Virginians feel safe and secure so that they are able to thrive where they live. Public safety is an essential component of a prosperous society, and the work of our police agencies supports all aspects of daily life. I commend the men and women who have served in the Alexandria Police Department for their courage, loyalty, and commitment to citizens.

This anniversary is an opportunity to reflect on how police work, and the role of police officers, has transformed over time. Now, more than ever, citizens look to our police officers for examples of leadership, integrity, and humility. I encourage the Alexandria Police Department to continue its legacy of public servitude, and to strengthen the community by growing with it.

Congratulations on your 150th year of service, I wish you the best in celebrating this milestone.

Sincerely,

Ralph S. Northam

Dear Friends,

It gives me great pleasure to congratulate the Alexandria Police Department as it celebrates its 150th anniversary in 2020.

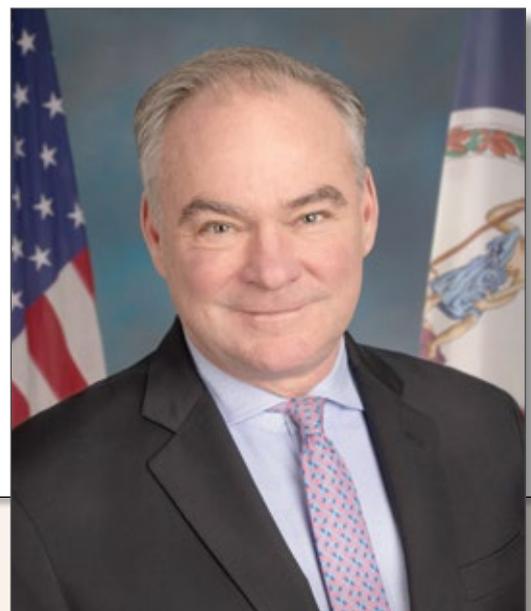

The Alexandria Police Department has played an instrumental role in fostering public safety through a tradition of honor and integrity. Since it was established in 1870, the Alexandria Police Department has continued to demonstrate a commitment to excellence in solving crimes, gathering evidence and keeping records.

I commend brave women and men of the Alexandria Police Department on this significant milestone and applaud you for your incredible work. It is your adherence to the highest standards that has made an enormous contribution to the public safety of the Commonwealth of Virginia.

Thank you for the valuable work that you are doing and please accept my best wishes for continued success.

Sincerely,

Tim Kaine

Dear Chief Brown,

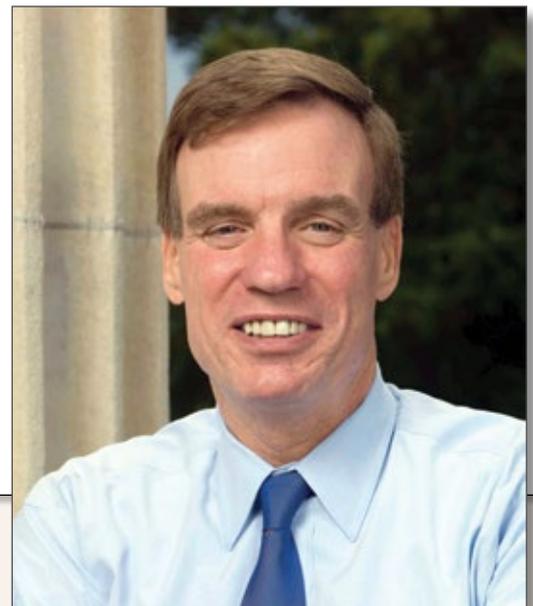

I am pleased to extend my warmest greetings to the members of the City of Alexandria Police Department as the Commonwealth celebrates your department's 150th anniversary in 2020.

As we recognize this important milestone, the Alexandria community takes a moment to reflect on the selfless service of your members and offer support for your exemplary work. While your methods of solving and combating crime have evolved since 1870, your commitment to protecting Virginians has remained steadfast. Without hesitation, you put yourself into harm's way to ensure the welfare and safety of your fellow citizens. Thank you for your 150 years of service.

I wish you continued success and progress in the years to come.

Sincerely,

MARK R. WARNER

March 20, 2019

Chief Brown,

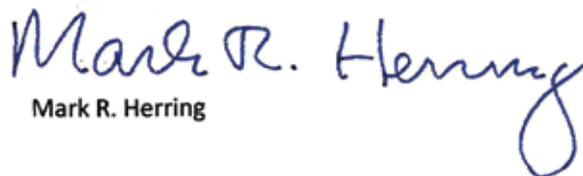

I write to congratulate the Alexandria Police Department on 150 years of honorable service to the citizens of Alexandria and to the Commonwealth of Virginia. Your selfless service has made Alexandria a safer place to live, work and raise a family. Today, Alexandria is a prosperous and rapidly growing community due to your tireless efforts to keep its residents safe.

Over the last few years, I have met hundreds of law enforcement officers who daily place their lives in harm's way. The large amount of respect I maintain for these men and women only grows each and every time I meet them. Your department admirably exemplifies courage and professionalism, setting the standard for other police forces across the Commonwealth. These traits were on full display in the summer of 2017, during your response to the Congressional Baseball shooting, when the eyes of the nation were on Alexandria. Your department has a strong legacy of tradition and accomplishment to be proud of in your service members.

The APD also enjoys a well-deserved reputation as one of the most responsive police departments in the Commonwealth. This is thanks to your emphasis on 21st century policing practices and community outreach; as well as efforts to modernize investigations, evidence collection and record retention. Members of your department have devoted countless hours of their time to provide Alexandria with not only an excellent sense of safety, but with a strong sense of community.

As you celebrate this amazing milestone, I know the residents of the City of Alexandria will remain reflective of the contributions your force has made for them.

Warmest wishes for a happy anniversary,

Mark R. Herring

Dear Chief Brown,

I congratulate you and all personnel of the Alexandria Police Department – men, women, and canines – who have consistently and bravely safeguarded our residents and property for the past 150 years. On behalf of the grateful residents of Alexandria, and with respect, I thank you.

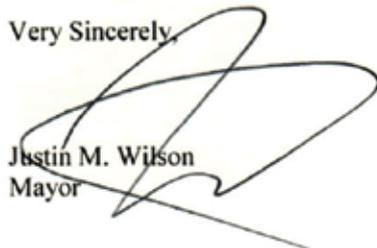

The bedrock of any thriving community is its safety, and since 1870 your colleagues have ensured that our City is a safe place to call home, to foster a successful business, and raise a family.

In the pages that follow, we will highlight the successes and sacrifices of this unparalleled and nationally-heralded police force.

May you and the public safety professionals who serve us every single day continue this exemplary service for generations to come.

Please accept my congratulations and gratitude.

Mr. Michael L. Brown
Chief of Police
Alexandria Police Department
Alexandria, Virginia

Dear Chief Brown:

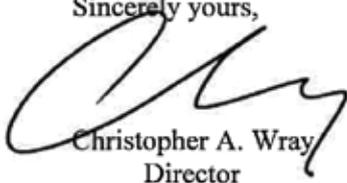

I want to extend the FBI's warmest congratulations to you and your associates as you plan the 2020 celebration of the 150th anniversary of the Alexandria Police Department (APD).

Reaching the 150-year mark is a noteworthy milestone for any agency and will, I am sure, generate much reflection on the history and accomplishments of the department. The devoted service of APD officers, both former and current, has played a vital role in earning your department a well-deserved reputation for excellence in law enforcement.

We all recognize that one of the basic tenets of modern policing is the need to establish solid, cooperative alliances with our public safety partners. Communication and mutual respect are critical. We are grateful for the outstanding working relationship between the Bureau and the APD. I would like to take advantage of this occasion to thank you for the support that the members of the APD have given us throughout the years. Working together, we have enjoyed great success in encouraging collaboration, networking, and the sharing of information and resources. We look forward to continuing this mutually beneficial relationship well into the future.

Please accept our best wishes for the years to come, which we hope will be filled with many additional achievements as you honor and celebrate the rich legacy of your agency.

Sincerely yours,

Dear Alexandria Police Department:

It is with sincere pleasure that I congratulate the Alexandria Police Department for 150 years of dedicated service to law enforcement, the community, and this great nation. Your department's commitment to maintaining and enhancing a productive partnership with the community has reduced crime and improved the quality of life for the residents of the City of Alexandria, Virginia.

On behalf of the Department of Homeland Security, I wish you peace and prosperity for your officers of today and the officers of tomorrow, as well as continued success in your future endeavors as a department and as a community. You have been part of the thin blue line that exists between our free society and those who seek to victimize the innocent, and we are truly grateful for your service.

It is my great pleasure to write and congratulate you on the occasion of the 150th anniversary of the Alexandria Police Department. The past century and a half have seen the department grow from a small constabulary to the highly motivated, professional force that it is today. It is an honor to be asked to write a letter for inclusion in the commemorative yearbook.

I am very proud that I began my career wearing the gray and blue uniform of the Alexandria Police Department. I look back on my days as a midnight officer with fondness. During my brief service with APD, I learned important lessons about integrity, courage and professionalism. Those three words continue to describe the bedrock values of the department and they are evidenced by your officers on a daily basis.

The Alexandria Police Department is the paradigm of what a public-safety agency should be. Your employees, sworn and civilian, always place the public's well-being first, doing so for little fame and less fortune. Your officers run toward trouble when it arises and tirelessly serve the community in a plethora of capacities. It is my privilege to work with such dedicated stewards of the public trust.

I congratulate APD on reaching this important milestone.

Sincerely,

Bryan L. Porter

City of Alexandria, Virginia

Dear Friends and Colleagues:

I am honored to join you in celebrating the 150th anniversary of the Alexandria Police Department. In the pages that follow you will see stories, images, and reflections that define the department's journey from its meager beginnings in 1870 to what is now a modern 21st century police department. Each page provides a glimpse of the department's history, and of contributions and sacrifices made by men and women whose devotion to duty honored those who came before and after them. You will learn how this history rich in tradition, innovation, pride, and a commitment to excellence, progressed into what the City and its citizens enjoy from the department today.

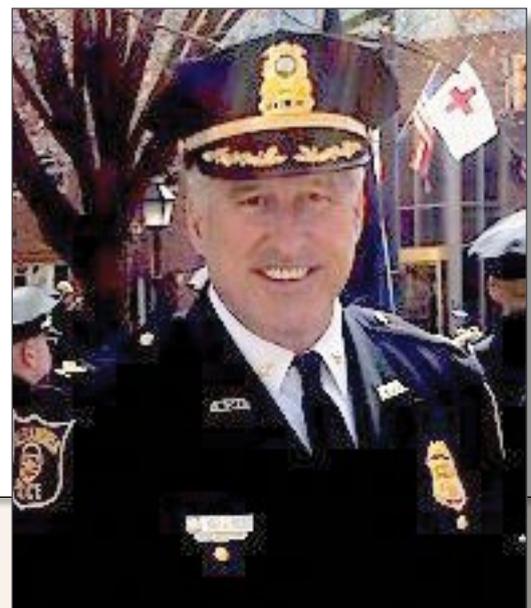

The department is one of the first to be accredited by the Commission on Accreditation in Law Enforcement, and remains accredited to this day. Alexandria enjoys one of the lowest crime rates in the country, and is nationally recognized as a safe and enjoyable place to live and work. The police department is highly respected for its leadership in public safety technologies, effective policing practices, innovation, diversity, community outreach and engagement, transparency, and integrity. None of this is possible, nor could it continue, without the work of our courageous men and women in blue, civilian staff, volunteers, and a supportive community.

Since its founding hundreds of police officers have served the department with honor and distinction, but none more so than the eighteen heroes who lost their lives in the line of duty. We cherish our memories of them. We honor them. We will never forget their courage, gallantry and personal sacrifice, or the loved ones they left behind.

I look back with enormous pride and a great deal of emotion that I was blessed to have been a part of the department's storied journey. The years I spent as Deputy Chief, and later as Chief of Police, were the best of my long career. To this day every time I pass the new police building, with its moving memorial to fallen officers, my heart beats a little faster as I think of the wonderful men and women who are the Alexandria Police Department.

Sincerely,

David P. Baker

We are very proud to celebrate the 150th Anniversary of the Alexandria Police Department and its fine tradition of service to the City of Alexandria. All of us who currently serve as members of this great organization are committed to providing services with professionalism, integrity, and dedication in the long tradition of our Department. It is an honor and privilege to work alongside the men and women who, today, make the sacrifices in providing this service daily.

The Alexandria Police Department was created on July 15, 1870 and has evolved significantly since then. The Department started with a few officers that donned the uniforms which resembled those of earlier departments in the United States. These uniforms resembled those worn by the “Bobbies” of the Metropolitan Police Force in the United Kingdom. I know those first Alexandria Police officers could not have imagined the Police Department that now serves the City. During the past 150 years, the Alexandria Police Department, as well as many other police agencies, faced political, social, and other historical issues.

Today’s Alexandria Police Department is a nationally recognized agency that is accredited by the Commission for Accreditation for Law Enforcement Agencies (CALEA), who set the gold standard for evaluating public safety agencies. The Alexandria Police Department uses some of the most advanced policing strategies and technologies in keeping residents and visitors safe. Our personnel are well trained and equipped to carry out their professional responsibilities in meeting today’s challenges.

All of us at the Alexandria Police Department bring unique skills and abilities which help us to provide exceptional policing services to the City; making the City a safe place to reside in and visit. Whether you wear a badge or not, all of us are dedicated to the mission of the Department in providing professional and equitable policing to Alexandria. We recognize this is a team effort and strive to do this every day. One belief we all share, is our dedication to serving the City and our pride in being a part of the Alexandria Police Department team. I believe we all have the “heart” to fulfill our departmental mission and the “desire” to provide quality policing services.

Accredited by the Commission on Accreditation for Law Enforcement Agencies, Inc.

I would like to acknowledge the courage, wisdom, and sacrifices shown by those who preceded us in the Departmental mission. They set forth the foundation for those of us who now carry the flag and are forever grateful for the “heart” they had during their time in the Department. The groundwork they built was critical in our development as a police department over the years.

I encourage everyone to share with your family and friends, this tribute to the Alexandria Police Department and its rich history. It captures the essence of our traditions, development, and service to the City of Alexandria. On behalf of all of us at the Department, we want to thank you for your interest in our organization and what we do every day.

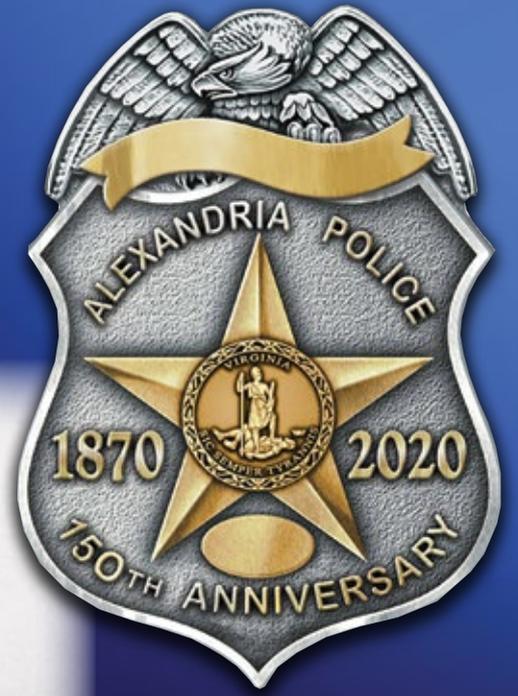

Sincerely,

Michael L. Brown, Chief of Police

ALEXANDRIA POLICE CHIEFS

Seated: Ex-Chief Webster, Chief Goods, and Lieutenants Smith and Pettis.

Captain James Webster

1870 to 1906

The following is taken from the book Images of America – Alexandria Police Department, by Amy Bertsch.

“When the Alexandria Police Department was officially organized in 1870, James F. Webster became its first chief, with the rank of Captain, and earned $ 600 annually. Webster oversaw police operations, organized raids of gambling establishments, arrested drunks and murderers, and investigated thefts, shootings, and even grave robberies. He served as chief until 1906, when his health began to fail, but he remained as a desk sergeant until he died in 1910.

Chief Charles Tudor Goods

1906 to 1923

Chief Haywood Durrer

1923 to 1925

The following is taken from the book Images of America – Alexandria Police Department, by Amy Bertsch.

“Captain Haywood J. Durrer was named chief in 1923, only months after he left Alexandria to be a Fairfax patrolman. One of Alexandria’s first motorcycle officers, Durrer was seriously injured in a crash but recovered and returned to duty around the time he was photographed holding his weapon with two unidentified men. He made dozens of traffic and liquor related arrests before briefly serving in Fairfax. As the Alexandria chief, Durrer vigorously enforced Prohibition and gambling laws. In 1925, Durrer left Alexandria again and rejoined Fairfax, rising to the rank of captain. He was again injured on duty when a hit-and-run driver struck him in 1936. He recovered and served three more years before his death in 1939. His son, William L. Durrer, later served for 17 years as the Fairfax County police Chief.

Chief William W. Campbell

1925 to 1931

The following is taken from the book Images of America – Alexandria Police Department, by Amy Bertsch.

“Capt. William W. Campbell (center) was the son of fallen officer Walker Campbell, and he was named chief in 1925. He first joined the force in 1916 but left in 1924 and was working as a railroad detective when he was tapped to be chief. Campbell served as chief until 1931.”

Chief Edgar Sims

1947 to 1952

The following is taken from the book Images of America – Alexandria Police Department, by Amy Bertsch.

“Maj. Edgar J. Sims joined the department in 1925 and worked his way up the ranks before officially becoming chief in 1947. He was one of the first detectives and also served as an acting chief during World War II. In 1945, he was elected president of the Virginia Association of Chiefs of Police. Sims retired as chief in 1952.”

Chief John S. Arnold

1931 to 1947

The following is taken from the book Images of America – Alexandria Police Department, by Amy Bertsch.

Capt. John S. Arnold served as chief from 1931 to 1947 but took a leave of absence during World War II. He had this photograph taken of himself as part of his initiative to establish Alexandria’s first “rogue’s gallery” around 1935. Shortly after Alexandria’s mug shot system was established, it paid off when a man caught in Alexandria was found to be an escaped inmate.

Chief Russell A. Hawes

1952 to 1970

The following is taken from the book Images of America – Alexandria Police Department, by Amy Bertsch.

“Maj. Russell A. Hawes became chief in 1952 after heading the detective bureau for more than a decade. Hawes, a former boxer and semi-professional football player, joined the department in 1931 and soon began working on major cases. In 1937, Hawes graduated from the FBI National Academy, the first Washington, D.C., area officer to do so. As chief, Hawes saw the department through a period of significant growth that included the West End annexation in 1952, the move to a new headquarters in 1959, the establishment of the Northern Virginia Police Academy in 1965, and the planning of the pistol range, which opened in 1970. Hawes retired in early 1970 after reaching the mandatory retirement age of 65. This image of Hawes testing a new radio was taken in 1966 at an International Association of Chiefs of Police conference.”

Chief John B. Holihan

1970 to 1977

The following is taken from the book Images of America – Alexandria Police Department, by Amy Bertsch.

“In 1970, after serving 28 years with the Syracuse Police Department in New York, John B. Holihan became Alexandria’s police chief, following Maj. Russell Hawes. Under Holihan’s command, the department commissioned a study from the International Association of Chiefs of Police on ways to improve the force. He also added a tactical team, which later grew into the Special Operations Team. Holihan retired in 1977.”

Chief Charles T. Strobel

1977 to 1987

The following is taken from the book Images of America – Alexandria Police Department, by Amy Bertsch.

“Charles T. Strobel was named chief in 1977 after Chief Holihan announced his retirement. Strobel joined the force in 1958 and rose steadily through the ranks. In 1983, the city manager appointed Strobel as the public safety director, a new position overseeing police, firefighting, and code enforcement. The consolidation of public safety operations ended in 1986, and Strobel remained police chief until his retirement in December 1987.”

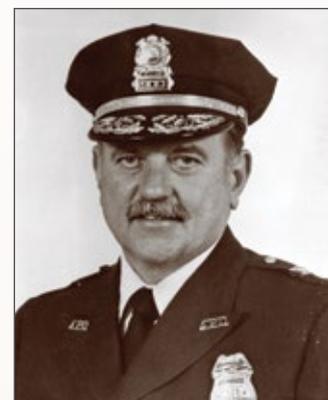

Chief Gary J. Leonard

1988 to 1990

The following is taken from the book Images of America – Alexandria Police Department, by Amy Bertsch.

“Gary J. Leonard was named chief in the spring of 1988. Leonard came to Alexandria after working for several police departments in the western part of the country. Leonard tried to target drug-related crime and budget challenges, but after two years, he resigned to become chief of a Utah police department.”

Chief Charles E. Samarra

1990 to 2006

The following is taken from the book Images of America – Alexandria Police Department, by Amy Bertsch.

“Charles E. Samarra, a 23-year veteran of the Metropolitan Police Department in Washington, D.C., was sworn in as chief in 1990 by Edward Semonian, the clerk of court. Under Samarra’s leadership, the Alexandria Police Department implemented community-based policing initiatives, increased the diversity of its staff, and established citizen police academies to educate the public about police functions. He also oversaw the modernization of the department’s technology, with mobile computers for every officer and an overhaul of the radio and 911 center. During this same time, Alexandria experienced a significant decrease in serious crime. Samarra, Alexandria’s 11th police chief, announced his retirement in the summer of 2006.”

Chief David Baker

2006 to 2009

Chief David Baker served in the Metropolitan Police Department in Washington, D.C., and came to the Alexandria Police Department to serve as Deputy Chief of Police under Chief Samarra. Chief Baker became chief in September 2006 and oversaw the department's implementation of the Strategic Response System style of policing and the restructuring of patrol deployment and investigative units. Chief Baker retired from the Alexandria Police Department in July 2009 but remains active in local politics and holds a position on the Board of Directors with the Alexandria Police Foundation and other local charity groups.

Chief Earl L. Cook became police chief in 2009 following the retirement of Chief David Baker. Chief Cook, a lifelong resident of the city of Alexandria, attended T.C. Williams High School, where he was a member of the historic Titans football team. He later earned a bachelor's degree in history and education from Duke University and joined the Alexandria Police Department as a police academy recruit in January 1979. Upon graduation, he worked in patrol and criminal investigations through 1989. Over the next six years, he was promoted to sergeant, lieutenant, captain, and assistant chief. As assistant chief, he managed the criminal investigations bureau, and was named deputy chief in that role three years later. In 2006, he rose to the position of executive deputy chief, serving as second in command; acting for the chief in his absence; and providing significant direction on the police department's policy and budget. In 2009, Cook became the first African American in the City's history to serve as Chief of Police, assuming command of more than 400 officers and civilians. Chief Cook retired in 2016 after serving 37 years in the Alexandria Police Department.

Chief Michael L. Brown

2017 to Present

Chief Michael L. Brown became police chief in January 2017 succeeding David Huchler, who served as Acting Chief following Chief Cook's retirement.

Brown has nearly four decades of experience in law enforcement, safety oversight, and public policy. He rose through the ranks of the California Highway Patrol, starting as a police officer in Los Angeles in 1977 and culminating in his appointment as state commissioner from 2004 to 2008. He previously served as chief or assistant chief in various divisions. As commissioner, he led one of the largest law enforcement agencies in the United States, with approximately 7,900 sworn personnel, 3,100 civilian staff, over 100 field offices, and a budget of $1.8 billion at the time of Brown's tenure.

From 2008 to 2009, Brown served as the Deputy Secretary for Public Safety for the State of California. In this capacity, he advised the Governor's Office on public safety issues and helped develop the state's strategic highway safety plan.

Since 2010, Brown has served as Director of the Office of Impaired Driving and Occupant Protection at the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA), where he is responsible for the development and implementation of national traffic safety policy and best practices. During his time at NHTSA, he has also served as Acting Associate Administrator for Research and Program Development and Acting Director of the Office of Emergency Medical Services and Office of Defect Investigation.

Brown is an Executive Fellow of the Police Foundation and serves on the Law Enforcement Committee of the Transportation Research Board. He has served as an instructor for nearly a dozen training programs for CHP, and as an adjunct professor for California State University, Sacramento. He has participated in many state and national task forces on such issues as police pursuits, homeland security, traffic safety, emergency planning, enforcement technology, and transportation.

Brown holds a bachelor's degree in criminal justice administration from California State University, Sacramento, a master's degree in criminal justice administration from California State University, Los Angeles, a master's degree in management from California State Polytechnic University, Pomona and a PhD in criminology, law, and society from George Mason University.

Brown is also a graduate of the California Peace Officers Standards and Training Command College and the Federal Bureau of Investigation's National Academy and National Executive Institute.
